The recent bilateral investment treaty award (hopefully) concludes a 14-year old dispute between Vodafone and India. This dispute had all the makings of a John Grisham novel – a retroactive tax legislation, proceedings before courts, conciliation, parallel arbitration proceedings and more. Ultimately, Vodafone prevailed in its fair and equitable treatment claim. This panel will address the more interesting aspects of this case and discuss what might come next. It will also discuss lessons learned from this arbitration.
